I personally curate our succinct winelist to harmonize with my menu design. Most wines were chosen because it tastes great with our food. and because they meet “a clean criteria”. They’re either family made, certified or practicing organic, green certified, sustainably managed. eco-friendly or a combination of all above. Go ahead, Google away.

Terms

BIODYNAMIC: Beyond organic. A farm, or a vineyard, is seen as a living system. All aspects of the vineyard are kept in natural balance.

CERTIFIED ORGANIC: Certified by a local governing body, no chemical fertilizers, pesticides, chemical enhancers or preservatives are added to the wine.

PRACTICING ORGANIC: Same as above, but not yet certified.

SUSTAINABLY GROWN: Vineyard management is environmentally progressive. Practices may include dry farming, use of insects and birds to control pests, beneficial cover crops, crop diversity within the vineyard, recycling, solar powered facility.

DRY FARMED: No irrigation is used, relying upon natural rainfall, preserving the local water supply.

GREEN CERTIFIED: Working with local authorities to meet local “Green” standards.

“ORANGE” WINE BY FRANCO TERPIN

No, there's no oranges in orange wine! They are white wines with prolonged skin contact which gives them an orangish, coppery hue. (Who doesn't need prolonged skin contact?) Terpin's Orange wines are made by only natural techniques: wild fermentation, no added wine yeasts or sulfur and long aging periods on lees in wooden barrels. Unfiltered, cloudy and complex like the dreams Terpin hopes they evoke. Totally Organic. 100% Grapes.

JOKAT 100% Tocai Friulano, '10, TERPIN, Venezia, It. <VG>	3 oz sample 8	16/60
